

PRE-COP29 INTERNATIONAL SYMPOSIUM: CONNECTING EDUCATION, PUBLIC HEALTH & SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT

The COP29 event in Azerbaijan makes multidirectional promises in the fight against climate change. This global event, which further supports green finance, is expected to be remembered with many successes. The symposium will be organized in a hybrid format at Khazar University on October 16, 2024, to highlight the topics of COP29 from the point of view of science, education, and public and global health and organize a scientific-social debate in these areas. During the event, students will showcase their art projects on climate change.

Climate change, the most serious phenomenon of the last centuries, is increasingly affecting the economies of all nations and the lifestyles of the population. In this sense, vulnerable populations are more exposed to the influence of climate change. On the one hand, sharp changes in temperature and precipitation, and on the other hand, the insufficient response mechanisms against these changes are putting the population living in these countries in increasingly challenging circumstances.

The main purpose of the symposium is to bring together people in education, health, and politics to discuss problems and solutions for combating and adapting to climate change. For this purpose, the plan is to bring together representatives of well-known institutes and organizations in the country and around the world. The area of focus is not only the riparian countries around the Caspian Sea but also the symposium has a clear Global scope.

The symposium covers and is not limited to the following topics:

- Climate Change and Best Practices in Water Management
- Climate Changes and Natural Hazards
- Health Impacts of Short-lived Climate Forces and Greenhouse Gases
- Advanced Technologies in The Reduction of Greenhouse Gases
- Biodiversity Restoration for Climate Change Mitigation
- Health Systems Response to Climate Change: Population Health and Healthcare Management.
